

Managing Difficult Feelings

MANAGING DIFFICULT FEELINGS

What are suicidal thoughts and feelings?

If you are having suicidal thoughts you may think it's the only way to escape what you feel is an impossible situation, you just want things to stop getting worse.

You are not alone! Many young people have experienced or are going through these types of thoughts and feelings even if they don't show it. Thinking about suicide is more common than we realise.

Don't be afraid to TALK.

Talk to an adult you trust about how you are feeling

Ask for support

Listen to advice and try any self-help tips suggested

Keep yourself safe, know who to contact if things get too tough

You may feel...

...hopeless...
useless... guilty
...no point living...

you've let people down...

that everyone
would be better off without you...
...desperate ...

...alone...
overwhelmed ...

frightened...
confused...too much emotional pain...

numb...
physically ill...

Why do I feel like this?

People will think of suicide for different reasons and it can be hard to identify and understand where these thoughts and feelings come from.

The trigger could be anything. A difficult life event, feeling under too much pressure, or several small things that have built up over time. Sometimes there is no reason.

Remind yourself these feelings will pass so try to put some time between these thoughts and any actions so you are able to get help. There are other options and solutions out there.

Exam stress
Loss and bereavement
Bullying, violence or abuse
Falling out with friends or family
Embarrassment or pressure on social media
Gender or sexual orientation
Had a big disappointment
Too much pressure
Serious illness
Anger

How can I stay safe right now?

In Crisis?

If you feel you cannot keep yourself safe from harm, or have a suicide plan that you are going to act on you need to talk to someone straight away and seek help.

Contact the CAMHS ReACH team. A parent or carer can ring, or you can do this yourself if you're over 16 years old.

Available between 9am - 8pm, seven days a week

tel: 01977 735865

If you're over 18 years old contact the Adult Mental Health team

tel: 01924 316900.

Ring your GP (they also have an out-of-hours service) or ring NHS 111. Be honest and tell them how you are feeling.

If you need urgent medical treatment go to A&E or call 999.

The people answering these calls are friendly and are used to helping people talk about difficult things.

Remove anything that you could use to harm yourself.

Ring the Samaritans free, any time, from any phone on 116 123 or Email: jo@samaritans.org

Even situations that seem impossible right now can feel different if you remind yourself that these feelings will pass and that you have ways to get through this painful time.

Things that may help

Remember that strategies work best when used as soon as you notice the thoughts and feelings. Try not to let them build up. Below is a list of things that may help...

Talk to someone you trust. Sharing how you feel means you are already seeking support. This is a positive step forward.

Contact a helpline, found at the back of this booklet, they will listen and help you find your own way forward.

Go somewhere or see someone who makes you feel safe. If that feels too difficult, call them.

Take 5 minutes at a time. Try to distract yourself, distractions are a short term solution to help you slow your thoughts down and focus on something else for a while.

Sit somewhere comfy and turn on your senses, start by finding

5 things you can see

4 things you can hear

3 things you can touch

2 things you can smell

1 thing you can taste

Do something physical...

Pop bubble wrap, dance, sing, stomp your feet (with shoes on), have a pillow fight with the wall, go for a walk or bike ride, or even clear out a drawer!

Do something creative...

Write how you're feeling or write about something totally different, do a blog or poem, read, draw, colour, knit, play a computer game, or cook something to eat.

Choose what you can cope with, here and now.

Don't try to solve problems alone, ask for help!

Write down what's worrying you or making you feel like this, as this can help.

Use your imagination to try and see what you can do that will change these unhelpful thoughts and feelings into helpful thoughts and feelings.

Unhelpful thoughts:

Someone has posted a hurtful lie about me on social media. Everyone will have seen it. What if they believe it and start laughing at me or my friends fall out with me?

Helpful thoughts:

This person has done it to other people before, they are a bully. My real friends won't believe it, if others see it, so what!

I can sort this out, I'm not alone and know where to get help if I need it.

What are the things that worry me?

How do I change these unhelpful thoughts and feelings to helpful ones?

My Plan

How do I cope in the future?

Take one day at a time!

Remember it's ok NOT to be ok sometimes.

Write a journal or blog of your moods, thoughts and behaviour. Could you share this with someone you trust to see if there is a pattern?

There are trusted websites that offer different ways to cope found at the back of this booklet.

If you try one of the strategies, but that doesn't seem to help, don't give up, keep trying as some take practice. You can still overcome these difficult feelings.

Recognise we don't have control over everything, such as people becoming ill or how other people behave.

Be kind to yourself, don't put yourself down. Create a positive mantra such as 'I can do this' or 'I've got this' and repeat it every day.

Plan something to do each day - set yourself small goals!

Try to...

Go out in the fresh air.

Meet up with friends or family (even though you may not want to).

Spend time with your pet.

Allow yourself to cry. It's a natural way to reduce emotional pain and stress.

Find out about Mindfulness, it can help change the way you feel.

Exercise more. It's a great way to improve your mental health because it releases chemicals that help improve your mood.

Create and use your personal self care box (found on page 12)
Do whatever works for you!

Getting Started

Write down a list of things to look forward to, like seeing someone who makes you laugh or who you care about. Stick these notes around your room and house to remind you.

Make a routine - this will help change your mind set and keep you active.

Get up early, have a shower and get dressed even if you don't have anywhere to go.

Eat and drink plenty of water.

Try to get 9 hours sleep- good sleep helps our mental health in so many ways. It helps to turn devices off one hour before you go to bed, as the blue light keeps our body awake.

Find a purpose

Find a reason to get out of bed.

Try a new activity or do something nice for someone.

Create a self-care box

Find and decorate a box, fill it with things that make you smile and remind you of the positive things you've got.

You could add photos, a book, event or football match tickets. Add something to keep your hands busy such as a stress ball, nail varnish, puzzle or colouring book, pens, even a piece of silky or furry material.

Make a list of people and helplines you could contact for support. Create a playlist of your favourite uplifting songs, as music can help us connect with our emotions.

A scented candle or fragranced shower gel can instantly change your mood. You can treat yourself by adding a packet of hot chocolate or a bar of chocolate.

Make your box as unique as you are!

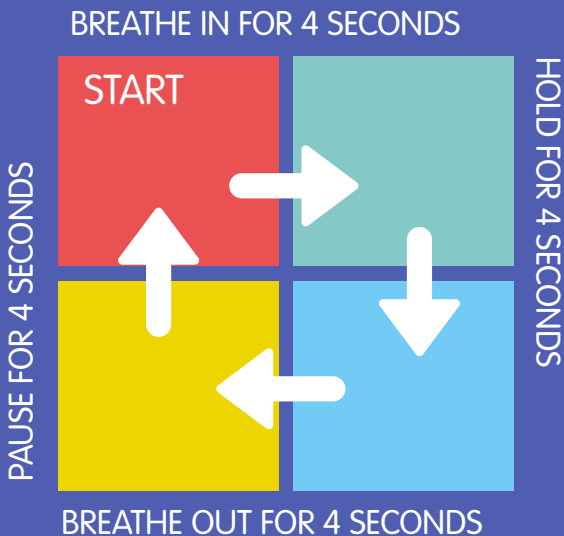

Calming breathing

When we are anxious our breathing gets quicker, when our breathing is calmer our brain will start to feel calmer too!

Rectangle Breathing

Draw or trace a square with your finger and count your breaths as you move round.

Follow the steps below and repeat 3 times.

Creating a safety net

A safety net is there to help you if you start to struggle, it can help you put things in place so you can get the right support when you need it.

It's easier to put together a safety net when you are calm.

Why not ask someone to help you? But make it 'yours'.

Try to identify what triggers your thoughts and feelings that are linked with these difficult feelings or self-harming thoughts.

What can you put in place to reduce these triggers? (an example is staying off social media on a night).

Make a list of things to lift and calm your mood (watch your favourite film or football team, photography or focus on your breathing).

Write down those who are important to you and things you are good at. Read these out loud and repeat if you are feeling low.

Identify things that can help you stay safe (use positive distractions or stay around people).

Make a list of family, friends, professionals, and helplines you can contact, add their contact details to your 'safety net', also save them in your phone (if you have one).

My personal safety net

I start to feel like this when:

I will reduce the risk of feeling like this by:

.....

I will lift or calm my mood by:

.....

I will tell myself:

.....

I can help me stay safe by:

.....

I will call or talk to:

.....

I will get help from these people and places:

Keep a reminder of the people and things you love, feel good messages, photo's and videos on your phone, put them in your wallet or around your room.
